Graduating from university is normally an occasion for a family get-together, and this was certainly a big celebration for the Ogunsanya quadruplets who were handed their well-deserved degrees from the same university on the same day. The 23-year-old quads, identical sisters and the oldest by four minutes, Toks and Temi, and identical brothers, Tobi and Tolu, graduated from Warwick University with Master Degrees.

All four have landed jobs in the city already. Toks graduated with an M.Eng. in manufacturing and engineering, and Temi, Tobi and Tolu all gained an MSC in management from Warwick Business School.

The quads, originally from Lagos, Nigeria, have been living in the United Kingdom since the age of seven when they began boarding schools before heading to Warwick University. Since leaving university they have all landed top city jobs.

Toks is due to start working for RBS in London later this year, Temi, who interned at Santander over the summer, has been offered a permanent position with the bank, and Tolu is due to start working for one of the 'Big 4' accountancy firms in the City. "Our parents are four times as proud of us," added Tobi, who is mulling over two offers from two major City firms." They've supported us financially and have encouraged us all the way. Without their help we wouldn't be here today," he said.

Police at Kempton Park in Johannesburg on Saturday. Some of the foreign nationals felt their rights were being violated when police searched their flats for illegal weapons, drugs and illegal immigrants.

A Nigerian, Kunle Oyekunbi, said that the police harassed them and their belongings were taken." The police came late in the night. They broke down our doors, they were just harassing everybody once you are a foreigner. They took our belongings and destroyed our property all in the name of searching for drugs and weapons." Oyekunbi continued, "Money was extorted from those who can afford it, those without money were arrested. Even our food was not spared by the Police, we are now left with nothing."

However, South Africa's Police Service (SAPS) spokesperson, Katilego Mogale, said nothing was confiscated as the raid was interrupted by the violence. The spokesperson said: "Some of the foreign nationals were involved in public violence; therefore the police had to detain some of them. The suspects will be appearing in the Kempton Park Magistrate's Court soon."

Meanwhile, more than 150 citizens of the Democratic Republic of Congo were arrested by the Police and would be charged to court. South Africa's Police Task Force arrested the suspects in their homes in Johannesburg after series of clashes between supporters of President Joseph Kabila of the Democratic Republic of Congo and the opposition leader, Etienne Tshisekedi.
